CULTURAL INFORMATION

The following cultural information is based on actual practice here in our Gardens and nursery.

WHAT YOU SHOULD DO FOR YOUR CAMELLIAS

Plant them in good rich soil with a liberal amount of fresh Dairy Fertilizer mixed with the soil. Plant them shallow so that the crown roots are near the surface. Each spring give them a mulching of 2 inches of well chopped fresh dairy fertilizer around the base of the plants. Keep them uniformly moist. Keep a mulch of leaves or Peat Moss under the plants at all times. Spray with Volk each May or June to control Scale pests. Spray with Bordeaux if Phomopsis Blight appears. Dust with S. A. T. Dust to control red spider. Prune out all irregular growth and dead branches. Plant them on well-drained soil. Plant them in shade or full sun, either will give good results though we prefer semi-shade. When buying Camellias do so while they are in bloom that you may know what you are buying. In cold weather when a freeze is reported be sure to have your Camellias good and wet.

Alba Fimbriata

WHAT YOU SHOULD NOT DO WITH YOUR CAMELLIAS

Do not plant them in wet soggy soil. Do not plant them too deep. Do not use fertilizers that will burn. Do not remove or loosen the burlap when planting. Do not lift a Camellia by the trunk; always pick it up by the burlapped ball. Do not spray your Camellias with oil spray in the fall or winter. This is important. Many fine plants have been killed with late spraying. Do not plant too near buildings or large shrubbery. Do not plant clay soil grown plants into loose porous soil as they will not give satisfactory results. Do not let them dry out completely nor drown them with too much watering. Do not water from a hose if using artesian water; rather use a sprinkler which aerates the water before entering the soil. Do not buy Camellias that look unhealthy though they are cheap. Unhealthy Camellias hardly ever recover. If you are not familiar with varieties do not buy unless there is a bloom so that you may see what you are buying.

Grafted Camellias

The understock used are from six to twelve years old; first year's growth averages from 18" to 40", well branched, with some having buds in the first year. Varieties available are only of the rarest and slowest of growers, since it is not profitable to graft common sorts.

Grafted Camellias are much more vigorous when on own root system. They flower much sooner and the bloom is larger. This season we can supply one and two-year-old grafted stock, ranging from 18" to 4'.

Rare Gold Medal Camellias

These varieties are the finest, rarest, most gorgeous of all available Camellias. We have spent ten years buying and trying out hundreds of varieties and of those hundreds we have selected the following varieties as being the most desirable, unusual and exquisite of them all. CULTURAL IN

Outside Culture in the South

LOCATION Either semi-shade or full sun are suitable.

SOIL A rich coarse acid soil is best, with much humus which will drain readily.

FERTILIZER 3-8-5 Azalea Special, or fresh Dairy manure with an application of 18% Superphosphate, are both recommended.

Application of Fertilizers — Early Spring and again in July.

INSECT CONTROL Red Spider: Dust with S.A.T. Dust. Aphids: spray with Black Leaf Forty Scale. Spray with Nursery Volk. 1 part to 50 parts water. Fungus: Spray with Bordeaux; 1½ lbs. Bordeaux to 50 gals. water. Angle worms (common earth worm): these breed in excessive moisture; let your ground dry out completely. If this does not eliminate them, then mix sharp builder's sand with the soil.

ACID SOIL To bring up the acidity of your soil, scatter sulphur dust around the plants, just enough to yellow the top soil. Then water in.

MULCHING Oak leaves are best, though you can use Straw, Pine needles, Peat moss, Spagnum moss, or any other materials.

WATERING Do not keep your Camellias or Azaleas too wet. Usually one thorough watering each week will be sufficient.

INFORMATION

- PLANTING Do not lift a burlapped Camellia by the trunk. Pick it up by the burlapped ball. Do not plant deep. Do not loosen or remove the burlap. After plant is in place pack soil firmly around ball. Water well at time of transplanting. Plant on well drained soil as they will not stand water-logged soil.
- IN FREEZING WEATHER Have your plants wet at the roots before a freeze. Covering with blankets, etc., usually does more harm than good. We do not cover our plants at all.
- FLOWERING PERIOD Camellias require much more water during flower development than at any other time. Lack of water will result in small, poorly developed bloom, and often retards the opening of bloom as much as four to six weeks when plants are kept dry.
- GREENHOUSE CULTURE Camellias must be kept cool while bringing them into bloom—a maximum of 45 d. F. at night. Lower temperatures are better. They will stand as low as 28 to 30 d. F. without injury. Shading on the grass will result in finer bloom. Keep them well watered during flowering season. If in tubs fertilize on top soil with fresh Dairy manure. In summer the plants can be moved outside until Fall.

Our show Gardens are open for visitors from September 1st to May 1st. There is no admission charge, we have ample parking space, good paved roads. We have more than 200 varieties of Camellia Japonicas and over 100 varieties of Azaleas. Camellia Sasanquas are in full bloom in October and November. Camellia Japonicas are in full bloom in January, Azaleas in late February through March.

Our Nursery is one of the most modern in the south, we have a large stock of Camellia Japonica, Camellia Sasanqua, and Azaleas, approximately 200,000 plants of the very finest quality at reasonable prices. We specialize in rare fine Camellias.

Many of our varieties are described in this catalog. However, we have many more varieties not listed, descriptions are inadequate and do not do justice to the beauty and elegance of Camellias. Come and see them in Bloom.
